DETAILED ACTION

Status of the Claims

1. This action is in response to the amendment filed on January 5, 2004. Claims 1-17 are pending. Claims 1, 9 and 17 have been amended.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-17 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Art Unit: 3621

5. Claims 1-2, 4, 9-10, 12 and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cross, U. S. Patent 6,144,726 in view of Barry et al., U. S. Patent 6,615,258.

As to claim 1, Cross teaches a method for processing user approvals or disapprovals of charge account transaction, said method comprising (column 2 line 59 – column 3 line 5):

- a) Presenting a charge account report to a user on a user display device, said charge account report including a listing of charge transactions which have occurred relative to said charge account (column 2 line 59 – column 3 line 5 and column 5 line 57 – column 6 line 18 and Figs. 1, 4);
- b) Enabling said user to provide user input to selectively indicate approvals or disapprovals with regard to user-selected ones of said transactions on an item-by-item basis (column 2 line 59 – column 3 line 5 and column 11 lines 1-14 and Figs. 4-7);
- c) Processing said approvals or disapprovals in response to said user input (abstract and column 2 line 59 – column 3 line 16 and column 5 lines 48-56 and column 9 lines 35-50 and column 11 lines 1-38 and Figs. 4-7).

Cross does not specifically teach the charge account report is a customized charge account report that generated according to said user preferences, and said user preferences including a frequency with which said charge account report is assemble and sent to said user, and sending said customized charge account report to said user at times as determined by said frequency selected by said user. However, Barry teaches allowing the user to select his or her preferences, customize the report accordingly, wherein said user preferences including a frequency of report generation, and sending the customized report to said user according to the frequency selected by said user (column 3 lines 42-47 and column 33 lines 30-33 and column 65 lines 37-41). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to allow the charge account report of Cross to be customized according to user preferences, wherein the user preferences including a frequency of report generation because it would allow the user to better organize and understand his or her charge account report.

As to claim 2, Cross teaches said charge account report is transmitted from an account server site to said user display device, and said user approvals or disapprovals are selectively transmitted from said user display device back to said account server site for said processing (Fig. 1).

As to claim 4, Cross teaches said charge account report is made available to said user at an account server site through a network connection (Fig. 1).

Claims 9-10, 12 and 17 are rejected for the similar reasons as claims 1-2 and 4. 6. Claims 3, 5-8, 11 and 13-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cross, U. S. Patent 6,144,726 in view of Barry et al., U. S. Patent 6,615,258 in further view of Bartoli et al., U. S. Patent 6,047,268.

As to claim 3, Cross modified by Barry teaches said account server device is operable in response to receipt of said user approvals or disapprovals (Cross: column 2 line 59 – column 3 line 5 and Fig. 1). Cross modified by Barry does not specifically teach to return an acknowledgement to said user to acknowledge receipt of said user approvals or disapprovals. However, Bartoli teaches return acknowledgement to the user to acknowledge receipt of (Fig. 2B). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to include the feature of sending acknowledgment to the user for acknowledging information has been received from the user because it would allow the user to know the information has been properly sent to the server.

As to claims 5-7, Cross modified by Barry teaches said charge account report is uploaded from server (Cross: Fig. 1). Cross modified by Barry does not specifically teach the charge account report is transmitted via email. However, Bartoli teaches transmitting account report via email (column 8 lines 7-12 and Fig. 2A-2B). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to include the feature of transmitted account report via email because it would allow the account information to be fast transmitted between user and server. Furthermore to claim 7, the method of Cross modified by Barry and further modified by Bartoli does not specifically teach the account report is embodied as an attachment. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to allow the report to be send as an attachment to the user so that the email message and the attachment would be separated so that user can easily review the account report.

As to claim 8, Cross modified by Barry does not specifically teach said charge account report is encrypted prior to sending said email, and being decrypted by said user after receiving it. However, Bartoli teaches encrypting email before sending and decrypting after it received (Fig. 2B). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to include the feature of encrypting email before sending and decrypting after it received so that the information can be safely transmitted between user and server.

Claims 11 and 13-16 are rejected for the similar reasons as claims 3 and 5-8.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Devine et al. (U. S. Patent 6,631,402) discloses a web based reporting system provides a common GUI enabling the requesting, customizing, scheduling, and viewing of various types of reports generated by different server applications.

8. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a).

Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
